A report from the N.C. Childhood Cancer Network shows that approximately 210 new cases of pediatric cancer were diagnosed in North Carolina in 2018, including 47 cases in children under the age of five. A new report from the National Cancer Institute shows that the most common type of pediatric cancer is leukemia. A new study published by the National Cancer Institute found that the most common type of pediatric cancer is leukemia. In 2018, leukemia was the most common type of cancer diagnosed in children less than 15 years old. Leukemia is a cancer of the blood, bone marrow and immune system. Researchers said there were 26,000 new pediatric cancer cases in the U.S. in 2017. The five most common pediatric cancers were leukemia, neuroblastoma, bone and soft tissue cancers, brain and other nervous system tumors and tumors of the kidney. Leukemia was the most commonly diagnosed cancer in children under age 15. For boys, the most common type of leukemia was acute lymphocytic leukemia. For girls, the most common type was acute myeloid leukemia. The incidence of pediatric leukemia increased from 6.9 cases per million in 2005 to 7.6 cases per million in 2015. Source: 2017 Cancer Facts & Figures The study also found that even though the most common form of childhood cancer is leukemia, treatments are changing in the fight against this disease. "There are amazing successes being made in the treatment of childhood cancers, but the five-year survival rate for cancer as a whole is still only 80 percent, and leukemia is one of the cancers in which progress has been slower," said Dr. Maria Anne Freeman, director of the National Cancer Institute. "But to reach our final goal of a cure for childhood cancer, we need to apply the latest discoveries in oncology to a new generation of treatments." Source: NCI Childhood Cancer Initiative Doctors said that the best type of cancer treatment depends on the type of cancer. "A type of cancer may be more likely to respond to a specific treatment," Freeman said. "Some treatments, like chemotherapy, are the same for the most common types of childhood cancer. But new treatments, like immunotherapy, are only now beginning to be used." Beth 09e8f5149f
