The WD TV Live Hub streaming box in my room Sunday, March 12, 2011 I've been using a Sony Bravia TV for well over a year now, and I am one of those people who are happy with their TV and the service that came with it. I've been through a lot of TVs over the years, and know the type of TV I want to go with. A good TV is an investment that pays off in the long run. A lot of people go for cheaper, more affordable options, they get into some trouble with their TV, and then end up with a big headache. Personally, I believe that the best option for your TV investment is going to be going for a high-end TV that will last you for more than a few years without any issues. The problem is though, that in today's world, it is hard to find a reasonably-priced high-quality TV that is truly worth the money. Recently, I had the chance to get a WD TV Live Hub streaming box, which is a product by Western Digital, a well-established and tech-savvy

We know that, initially, it can be kind of difficult to get the hang of this app, however, once mastered, it offers quite a few advantages. And, at times, it may save you a good amount of money and time while in the process. Best thing is you can customize most of your different tabs to show the information that you need. Each tab has their own icon, that means if you want to do the transfer when you are using a certain tab just press the icon to start the transfer process.
