At least 49 people have been killed after an explosion at a Syrian oil refinery near a central Syrian town killed at least seven of the attackers, and left at least four policemen dead, according to state media. The blast, which rocked the town of Halayeb, destroyed at least three oil trucks and damaged several other vehicles, the Russian-run news agency, ITAR-TASS, reported on Monday. It was unclear if the blast was caused by a mine or a bomb. “We’ve ruled out sabotage,” a Syrian government source told the AFP news agency. A local official said that the incident took place near the town of Hmaymah, a rebel stronghold west of Halayeb. Government troops backed by dozens of tanks had stormed the town on Monday, the Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, a UK-based war monitor, said. The toll of those killed in the incident was unclear. Syria’s state-run SANA news agency reported that six attackers were killed after the blast. The agency did not give a number of those wounded. Syria’s main oil pipeline running from the Hassaniya refinery, on the Euphrates river, to the port of Baniyas was temporarily closed to traffic after the incident. “Two oil trucks were destroyed in the incident, one tanker was damaged and two vans were also destroyed,” the official added. “
