The film is dreamlike in its reception, and the scene in which our protagonist, Daniel, is reading his cell phone while in an elevator with his neighbor, is likened in its simplicity to the "nine or ten minutes when a bird just lands on your head." Throughout the film, we observe Daniel as he listens to his iPod, having come from an evening of boozing with friends in which he was not sober during the playing of an onstage song. As his nocturnal reverie continues in his apartment, Daniel passes through a series of different houses and rooms, each of which contains a different kind of listening experience. With his cell phone, he plays 3da54e8ca3
