Whereas type 1 diabetes mellitus (T1DM) is mostly characterized by insulin deficiency, our understanding of the specific contribution of islet-related and extra-islet factors to its development has not been comprehensive. T1DM is considered as a multifactorial disease and, although the pathophysiology is not fully understood, islet autoimmunity is considered to play a key role. The aim of our study was to evaluate the presence of mucosal lesions in T1DM patients, with respect to age and diagnosis at presentation. We performed a cross-sectional study of 4,939 consecutive T1DM patients (1,301 males) who attended our T1DM clinic from 2008 to 2010. The patients were divided into two age groups: 15-45 years (children) and 46-64 years (adults). Patient clinical parameters were recorded, and mucosal lesions were recorded in the oro-nasal and the esophagogastric mucosa. Severe malnutrition was defined as a body mass index (BMI) 1cb139a0ed
