What's new:

First Sentai: 26 According to tradition, the beginnings of the Sentai always include a visit to the gravesite of the Legendary Defender. I hope this loss does not mean that the Rangers will no longer seek him out from time to time, as there's lots of story left to tell! In my original pitch, I had intended for Scorpina to be the first team to be formed with the villain as a member, and I still can't tell why that was done so randomly. It seemed to make sense when we were going to make The Megaforce, as we were going to send some new villains with Dr. Mind over to A Guardian Alliance to kick off Megaforce Season 2. Instead, we ended up going with Blackwolf first. I'm looking forward to Scorpina on the team! RANGEKOR! The Warrior!

CROSS-BODY RAINDANCE Here's a single rank-up for Scorpina that evokes a little more of my era of Power Rangers. Scorpina is obviously a returning Ranger, and I felt that she needed better Power, so I took some ideas from various incarnations of Darkwing on some new moves. The Rain Dance ability here allows Scorpina to do something a little different - if she dances, the entire environment around her will be temporarily erased for a few seconds, and she can choose to clear an area to make up for it. This cancels out her ability to throw weapons or summon her own monsters, so her enemies can't counter the Rain Dance. If she uses it while running, she can also quickly Teleport to someplace less dangerous. But her real bread and butter is in her two Pressure Attacks. The "ArmAttack" version is simple, straightforward, and potent. She can use it to try and force an opponent out of their current formation, but it can be vital in the middle of a battle, blocking an opponent from advancing without immediately counterattacking. I like the way that this ability is about as likely to be used as a Power Attack, because it represents what she actually is as a Ranger - she uses Pressure Attacks a lot. She also uses Pressure Attacks on the field - "Fortress" is not a normal attack, which means that it does significant damage to her own team! And what good are giant Bulky Water Guns without the "Glow Peen"

Daniel Cormier is fighting for the UFC light heavyweight title against Jon Jones. It will be the first fight for either of them in the UFC, and if you were hoping for some other light heavyweight bout to headline UFC 197, look away now. Jones is entering this title fight with just a 5-0 record, and the last one was a narrow three round decision over Ovince St. Preux at UFC 182. Although no one was really expecting him to win that fight, it should have come with a warning that there could be trouble ahead if he doesn't learn to fight a bit more quickly. Cormier was the Strikeforce light heavyweight champion, and he has been the champ for a while, but the longest streak of undefeated light heavyweights in the UFC was eight (Cormier had a six fight winning streak in the UFC), so anything can happen. At the age of 37, he has started to show his age in how he is fighting, but he has made it a point to stay in better shape than the rest of the light heavyweights in the UFC. He had 12 octagon visits last year, and if he stays healthy, which he will need to, he could be fighting one of the top five light heavyweights in the UFC. He is very durable, and he showed that in his bout against Vitor Belfort at UFC 187, where he put on an impressive performance and finished the fight after being rocked with a barrage of punches. And as his 19 wins against hard
