It is engaged in creating, purchasing, processing, manufacturing and marketing products and services. Mondelez International, Inc. operates through two segments: Kraft Foods and Mondelez. The Kraft Foods segment sells packaged dairy, ready-to-eat, cooking and snack foods in North America. The Mondelez segment sells snacks, non-dairy beverages, convenience foods and chewing gum in North America. The company was founded on August 31, 2008 and is headquartered in Deerfield, IL. Reasons to Buy We anticipate strong growth in non-dairy beverages next year driven by the growth in the Chinese market and continued improvement in pricing for dairy-based beverages. A continued strength in Kraft Foods' Dairy Foods segment remains in place. We anticipate share gains for Mondelez this year and next year driven by growth in both the Kraft Foods and Mondelez segments. Reasons to Sell Weakness in the budget and generic coffee categories in late December 2016 and late January 2017 caused Mondelez' non-dairy beverage margins to weaken. The dollar is negatively impacting Mondelez' margins since Kraft Foods' dollar-denominated products are being impacted. The cessation of production and sales at the former Keurig Green Mountain facility

Guide the orb through the stages. Landing on the right platforms allows the orb to ascend and ascend again. Take note of the timing involved, because a few milliseconds too slow will result in instant contact with a high-speed electric field, and you will be instantly de-orbited. Too soon or too fast means instant contact with a teleporter or pressure-sensitive platform, and you will be instantly removed from the orb, thus resulting in failure. NOTE! Some stages may have multiple buttons/platforms which accelerate the orb more than others. A few stages have modifiers; they increase the orb's acceleration, which is crucial to your success. Get the orb across the whole screen to move to the next level. Rolling Gauntlet is a no-frills, non-stop game-play simulator with a simple objective: Guide the orb through each level's course to the end. But do not be fooled: within lies many perils to be braved: high-speed electric repulsion fields, teleporters, pressure-sensitive drop platforms, and various other obstacles. But the greatest opposition on your path to victory. is YOU. Will you second guess your jump? Will you underestimate your momentum? Will you let down your guard? From laughable to seemingly impossible, will you keep victory in sight? Or let it roll away? Welcome to the Rolling Gauntlet Trials. See if you are ready to traverse the universe in four demo levels. (full version) All the same, the app is a great experience and is one of the most addicting games I've ever played. A great game to waste some time on. More power to the developers for making such a great game! Rated 5 out of 5 by daussian0 "Amazing" game I played this game for a long time, after all I had on that one time downloaded it from the app store. It seems I found my game because I need another game to occupy my time when I'm not at the school. The game is super addictive, I'm always playing it. If you're looking for an addicting game, this one is perfect for you. It's very fun and you can get an easy time. I really like it. The gameplay is something I'm always looking for, a game that is always entertaining. I'm going to be playing it for a long time. I recommend you guys to download this game if you want a cool game. I really recommend this game. Rated 4 out of

Railway |} |} The Settle-Carlisle Railway was a railway company which ran between Settle in the English county of North Yorkshire and Carlisle in Cumberland. It formed part of the Great Central Main Line of the London, Midland and Scottish Railway from 1923, and was absorbed into the British Railways in 1948. History Background The Settle-Carlisle Railway was opened on 6 June 1838. At first it was a joint line of the Settle and Greta Railway and the Newcastle & Carlisle Railway Company (later the Carlisle, Newcastle & East Coast Railway). It was continuous from Settle to Greta Bridge, with a branch from on to Westow to connect with the London & North Western Railway. The next milestone on the line was the junction with the London & North Western at Cornforth & Windermere Junction. A further branch branched off at Westerdale and connected with the Leeds Northern & West Coast Railway, enabling regular trains to be run direct to Preston, Blackpool and Liverpool, though these trains were not generally advertised as running through. The North British Railway were formed in 1844; the NBR bought both the north- and south-western ends of the GN&CR line in 1848. The line passed under the sea and was formally opened for railway use at the start of the railway steam age on 15 May 1851 between the GNR Wylfa station and the NBR station at Port Elizabeth. A further line was opened from Settle to Lughwaite in March 1855. In 1865, the sections of the line to Hull and Newcastle departed to form the Hull and North Eastern Railway and in October 1873, to form the new Leeds Northern Railway. The GNR connection to the GN&CR was severed in 1887. The GN&CR became part of the newly formed London & North Eastern Railway in 1923. Up to 1922, there were no purposes for the Settle station, and it had been renumbered from the old GN&CR station of Portobello. The passenger station was just an abutment to the running line, and a separate station building had recently been built for goods traffic. It was renamed Settle & Carlisle Railway station. The point of junction of the GN&CR line opened in 1855 lies west of Settle Station, which is an abutment to the main line continuing north west to Rossett. Most stations were provided on curves on
