It was added to the National Register of Historic Places on January 18, 2000. History A citizens group named the Milton Library Association (MLA) was started in 1906 to help raise funds for a library. It was named for Milton B. Hirsch, a town resident and member of the MLA. That year, the MLA bought a plot of land for $10,000. MLA members had the land surveyed and the plan drafted by a Chicago architect. The MLA's plan was to have a H.E. Butler building. The MLA applied for a Carnegie grant, but was rejected in 1907. The MLA then started raising funds to build the library themselves. To convince the town to create a public library, MLA member Art Kohn led a petition drive and convinced Milton's residents to vote for a $4,500 bond issue. The library opened in 1916 on the $4,500 the town had raised. The MLA applied for a Carnegie grant, and the Library Board of Trustees changed the name to the Milton B. Hirsch Public Library. Even with the money the MLA got for the Carnegie grant, the MLA was still short about $6,000 by the time the library was built. When the library opened, it was located at 806 Main Street. In
