Ask HN: How To Make Your Startup's PPT Presentation More Meaningful? - kohala Most of the time, when people talk about startup companies, they talk about the startup itself, and the team that works there. But, actually, how should you go about conveying the meaning of the business in a 2D presentation? Since most of the time you have less than 5 minutes, you can't present your product in a comprehensive way. What if you have something like a startup consulting company, providing services to other startups? You know that the value you add is quite significant. How do you make this clear in a two dimensional space? ===== dozzie Find the aspect you want to present, choose better pictures for that aspect (because posterization of your original pictures is a task like crushing pebbles into sand with a sieve). ~~~ kohala I'd love to have time to find the pictures, but I'm not sure how much a difference that would make. Also, the presentation format is going to be limited to 2D, given that I can't use the side-by-side windows from Excel pro. ~~~ dozzie > Also, the presentation format is going to be limited to 2D, given that I > can't use the side-by-side windows from Excel Define "going to be" in the scope of your presentation. If the scope is the whole "launch presentation", then you have to run into problems. > But, actually, how should you go about conveying the meaning of the business > in a 2D presentation? It shouldn't. It's like saying how should you go about conveying the meaning of a blog post in a 2
