Q: Setting currency in QComboBox I have a QComboBox in my GUI, and it's a currency combo that displays two number groups, one being the integer part of the currency and the other being the fractional part of the currency. How can I modify the QComboBox to achieve this? I can't find any associated documentation. A: If you want a custom cell for your combo and you can access it in the slot connected to the ComboBox you can see the documentation on custom cell creation in the QComboBox reference. If you need just a small modification of the existing default implementation for the QComboBox you can create an subclass of QComboBox and override the paint method in that way: From the documentation we can see that the default implementation draws the text with a specific font, size, color and alignment: Note: To support the current user-interface theme, the default implementation uses Qt::AlignHCenter on the Qt::TextWordWrap style. All styles that don't override this property use the original implementation. So I would suggest to override the paint() method and do whatever you need for your project. QComboBox#paint is defined as: void QComboBox::paint(QPainter *painter, const QStyleOptionComboBox &option, const QModelIndex &index) const { QString text; const bool isEnabled = index.isValid() && option.isEnabled && (index.data(Qt::EditRole) == text); QPalette p = ui->comboBox->palette(); p.setColor(QPalette::WindowText, isEnabled? Qt::white : QColor(Qt::red)); p.setColor(QPalette::Base, isEnabled? p.color(QPalette::Window) : QColor(Qt::red)); if (!index.isValid()) text = QApplication::translate("QComboBox", "Select an item", Q_NULLPTR); else text = index.data(Qt::EditRole).toString(); QR
