Q: How to protect against accidental overwriting? I am using Java, and some third party jars. I have not made any changes to any of the jars (I have added no additional jars) but as I understand it any changes to jars that are included in classpath will need to be updated and published. How do I find what has changed in the jars I have installed? Thanks A: You have to download the source and check the history of your jar files. For example, I have a project with multiple libraries and I can check all of the changes with this way: First, I will update the library with this: mvn install:install-file -DpomFile= \ -Dfile= -Dfile= Then I will check the history: git ls-files You can also check the git log if you have already cloned the project in git. As a well oiled machine, the NFL on ESPN production staff was putting the finishing touches on the New York Jets-Kansas City Chiefs matchup for the week of Sunday, Sept. 23. Mozah (@mohaszy) and Booger (@BoogerMcFarland) discussed the possibility of the Chiefs scoring an upset win in the season opener against the Chargers, then switched gears to preview the Jets offense. Mike Clay (@MikeClayNFL) broke down the Jets receiving corps by position. The show capped off with an in-depth look at the Jets’ play-calling and tempo: It’s been a long offseason and the NFL season is on the horizon. Thursday, Sept. 12, 2018 is the first game and we’ll be here for all of the action. Did you miss any of the action?
