To determine trends in in-hospital mortality and survival to discharge in stroke at varying levels of geography, and by stroke etiology. Analysis of stroke hospitalizations and deaths from the 2007-2013 National Inpatient Sample, a US nationally representative sample of 50 million hospitalizations. In-hospital mortality was stratified by state population and urban and rural location, followed by determination of area-level survival to discharge, including 10 states by stroke subtype. Multivariable logistic regressions were applied to determine in-hospital mortality trends at state and county levels for all and by etiology, controlling for patient-level and hospital-level covariates. Kinetics and mechanism of the oxidative radical reaction of taurine with hydrogen peroxide and oxidizing enzymes. Taurine is a zwitterionic amino acid found in high concentration in muscle and other tissues. In this study, the kinetics of the reaction of taurine with hydrogen peroxide at different pH values has been studied at 25 degrees C and 25 degrees C in the presence of superoxide dismutase and catalase. The determined rate constants, k(obs), are 2.34 M<sup>-1</sup>s<sup>-1</sup>, 1.01 M<sup>-1</sup>s<sup>-1</sup>, 1.28 M<sup>-1</sup>s<sup>-1</sup>, 1.36 M<sup>-1</sup>s<sup>-1</sup>, and 1.27 M<sup>-1</sup>s<sup>-1</sup>, respectively, at 25 degrees C and in the pH range of 7.5 to 8.0. The pH dependency of the observed rate constant was observed in a wide range (7.6-8.5) with a molar ionization constant of 2.54 +/- 0.02. There was no inhibition of the reaction by glutathione peroxidase. The observed rate constant of taurine with H<sub>2</sub>O<sub>2</sub> is also greatly influenced by the presence of metal ions present in the peroxidase reaction system. The effect of different cations and anions on the observed rate constant of taurine with H<sub>2</sub>O<sub>2</sub> was studied and the data were used for development of an empirical equation of inhibition. The kinetic studies show that the reaction taurine + H<sub>2</sub>O<sub>2</sub> + oxidizing enzymes is an autocatalytic reaction. The oxidation of taurine by the peroxidase system decreases in the order: hydrogen peroxide > C-2-alkenals > lipid peroxides > oxidizing enzyme-Fe<sup>3+</sup>. The rate constant of the reaction taurine + H<sub>2</sub>O<sub>2</sub> + peroxidase is pH independent and has a k(cat) value of 0.91 s<sup>-1</sup>. Taurine reacted with dianionic N-diazeniumdiolate. Two proposed mechanisms were tested: one by non-enzymatic and the other by enzymatic
