Moe and Joe both have dreams of becoming celebrities. They both have an acrobat dog named Speed, who makes a cameo appearance. Gameplay: The player either defends a free-roaming President Reagan from ninja attacks, or fights alongside him through an open-ended world filled with battles, traps, and hazards to save him. A popular way to play over the years was to fight on top of a sports car moving down the side of a skyscraper, or in the maelstrom of a garbage dump. In order to drive the sports car on the sharp rocks, the player must collect speed pellets, which are fed into the sports car's hungry engine. The player is also attacked by enemies and can use melee attacks as a last resort to dispatch them. A knife can be thrown by the player in order to attack a ninja. Players can jump, run, and perform ninja moves, such as dodging, as they progress through the stages. When either player hits an enemy, the game restarts from the beginning of the level. If only one player is playing, they must move on alone through the levels, with the other player's character standing by in case of imminent death. If they die, the game restarts the episode over again. Multiplayer mode adds a level of strategy, since players must work together to survive. However, it also adds a level of risk and death. Players must keep an eye out for incoming ninja attacks in order to survive.
