I need to store an array in a MySQL DB. What's the best way to do this? A: Option 1 Remove $var['id'] from $x = $var; and store $x['id'] instead (Some other nasty surprises here, but nothing you can't recover from) $x['id'] = $id; // Keep the original value of $id. Option 2 Store the array without indices (what's it called in PHP land?) In 8% of the patients, the roentgenological examination was suggestive of the existence of an abnormally thickened mucosa, while the histological examination confirmed the existence of a tumour (15 cases
