

Highlights of “HyperMotion Technology” include the new “Playmaking System,” which will allow players to off-load possession and direct the game toward different passing and attacking options. Using the “Playmaking System,” players can gain a distinct advantage by stepping out of the defensive line and offloading to an attacking teammate. This new system will also enable them to execute from the middle of the field, or even behind the opposing goal line. The depth of play during FIFA video game titles has always been a feature of our titles. The new motion capture data recorded from real football players will enable us to bring players closer to the action than ever before. This is in addition to the new Maneuvering System and Unrivaled Ball Physics. Developed by 22cans, SimulatioX is the motion-capture suite that powers the game. 22cans is a talent network connecting the best athletes in the world and the companies and developers that support them. We’re working to build a deep pool of pro athletes, developers, and coaches to support the game’s implementation. Collectively, the world’s best footballers, players, coaches, and football-science experts will have access to new tools, information, technology, and data that will be used to design a deeper football experience.
