The first gene coding for DNA polymerase beta (pol beta) of a higher plant (Rice) is described. This gene (POLL) is located on a 12.1 kb BamHI fragment of the EcoRV chromosomal DNA library of rice. The complete sequence of the 1.7 kb BamHI-PstI fragment containing the DNA coding region of pol beta has been established. The gene is organized in three exons and one intron of 1.7, 2.2, 1.0 and 6.6 kb, respectively. The 4.1 kb of untranslated 5' and 3' flanking sequences show high A+T content (74%) and homology with the intron sequence of pol beta from human and mouse. The complete nucleotide sequence of the untranslated and transcribed regions of the rice gene was determined and the positions of transcripts were assigned to Exon 1 and to Exons 3, 2 and 1. Pol beta gene expression in rice was shown by the presence of mRNAs of 3.4 kb. As in other eukaryotes, Pol beta is one of the most abundant mRNAs in plants. Deubiquitinase USP13 stabilizes the Cdc4-Cdc14 cell cycle checkpoint complex to prevent its ubiquitination and promote mitotic progression in Saccharomyces cerevisiae. Ubiquitin-mediated degradation plays a crucial role in the maintenance of proper function of cellular components, which is the central regulatory mechanism of cell cycle checkpoints. However, the ubiquitin-dependent degradation of checkpoint proteins is not fully understood, particularly in vivo. Here, we show that the Cdc4-Cdc14 cell cycle checkpoint is stabilized by deubiquitinase USP13 during G1 phase, and ubiquitin-dependent degradation is blocked by USP13 during S phase. USP13 prevents E3 ubiquitin ligase anaphase-promoting complex/cyclosome (APC/C) from targeting the Cdc4-Cdc14 complex. The USP13-dependent stabilization of Cdc4-Cdc14 is mediated by the SCF ubiquitin ligase. We also found that overexpression of USP13

Prenatal diagnosis of neural tube defects: a study of cases referred to a prenatal diagnostic unit in North-West England. A prenatal diagnostic unit, where approximately 4,500 patients have been referred since its opening in 1979, was in use for a one-year period and approximately 350 cases were referred. In this study, we present the findings in these patients and discuss the significance of these findings. Six hundred and fifty-four pregnant women were referred during the one-year period. Of these 49 were known to have a family history of neural tube defect and 23 of these were affected. Fourteen of the remaining 505 pregnant women had an abnormal amniocentesis; three of these are expected to have a neural tube defect. Ten of the mothers who had a normal amniocentesis at 9 to 10 weeks' gestation subsequently had a neural tube defect in their babies. The cases with an abnormal amniocentesis at 16 weeks' gestation consisted of six infants born with spina bifida, two with a diastematomyelia, and one with meningocele and hydrocephalus. In one case the karyotype was found to be normal. In another the diagnosis of Down's syndrome was made after a re-test at 12 weeks. There is evidence of improvement in the rate of neural tube defects after the introduction of the amniocentesis since the advent of chorionic villus sampling. The main reason for referral to a prenatal diagnostic unit was because of a family history of neural tube defect. In approximately 40% of cases a neural tube defect was detected in the first trimester. Biosurfactant production from algal extracts by Pseudomonas aer d0c515b9f4
